

Where to Find Your Land PID

PID is the Parcel Identification Number that exists for all parcels of land in Nova Scotia. It is an eight digit number. Now or in the near future, various organizations will be requesting your PID on a particular piece of property when they are interacting with you. Examples may include requiring a PID when processing certain funding or taxation issues.

You can access your PID through a number of avenues. These include:

- ViewPoint – this is a real estate site which is free to use and a PID can be accessed by entering in your civic address

<http://www.viewpoint.ca/>

- Property Online – offers information collected through the province’s Land Registration Offices and other sources. Property Online requires you to subscribe and pay a users fee.

- Nova Scotia Coordinate Referencing System viewer – this site is free to use and requires you to identify your property through a street map or high resolution satellite imagery. You will have to click the property box in the Layers menu.

If you do not have access to the internet then you can call your local municipal office.

Municipal tax bills and Property Valuation Services assessment do not show PID numbers.
